1. The Acres of Diamonds Flip

The Acres of Diamonds is a true story about an African farmer who heard tales about other farmers who had made millions by discovering diamond mines. The farmer, very excited, sold his farm to go prospecting for diamonds himself. He spent the rest of his life wandering the African continent searching diamonds unsuccessfully. Finally, worn out and in a fit of desperation, he threw himself into a river and drowned.

Meanwhile, the man who had bought his farm happened to be crossing the small stream on the property one day, when suddenly there was a bright flash of blue and red light from the bottom of the stream. He bent down and picked up a stone. It was a good-sized stone, and admiring it, he brought it home and put it on his fireplace mantel as an interesting curiosity.

Several weeks later, a visitor picked up the stone, looked closely at it, hefted it in his hand, and nearly fainted. He asked the farmer if he knew what he'd found. When the farmer said no, that he thought it was a piece of crystal, the visitor told him he had found one of the largest diamonds ever discovered.

Start from exactly where you are. Take a look around you and look at what you have in your home. Ask what you own that you can list and sell. Look at your clothing. Look in drawers. Look down in your basement, attic, storage, and start selling the stuff you are never going to use.

2. The Archie Bunker.

"Archie" Bunker is the hilarious fictional character from one of my favorite 1970 TV shows called 'All in the Family'. Archie plays this gruff, overbearing grouch primarily defined by his bigotry towards blacks, Hispanics, "Commies," gays, hippies, Jews, Asians, Catholics, "women's libbers," and Polish-Americans. And it's your family you need to turn to for selling. After you've exhausted and sold all of your personal belongings, it's time to look at the property owned by your family. You should by now have made a few sales and know how to use all of the selling applications. You should have met some of your buyers and understand how easy flipping items can be. Your confidence should be higher. So, what does your family have to sell? Family members include your mother, your father, your sister, your brother, your cousins, your grandparents, your uncle, and your aunt.

There is no one in your family who does not own something they would like to sell IF YOU DO THE WORK! Just call them up and ask them if you can help sell some of their stuff. Let them know you will split the money with them. Let them know you will do all of the work. Let them know you will put it all down in writing, so they know what to expect. Family is a great place to build a name for yourself and your selling service.

3. The Jennifer Aniston

Jennifer Aniston is worth a reported $240 million. It all started in Hollywood ever since she landed her breakthrough role as Rachel Green in "Friends" in 1994. She's a sought-after movie star, earning her a net worth in the hundred-millions, according to Forbes, who ranked her as one of America's richest female entertainers in 2017. By the end of its 10-season run in 2004, Forbes reported that Aniston earned $1.25 million per episode. Just remember, it all started with 'Friends'. And it's the same for you. There is a saying out there about NEVER doing business with friends. As long as you set the rules ahead of time and get it in writing, you should be ok selling your friend's stuff. Here's a simple agreement you can use to sign with your friends that will outline the deal. Use this and get it all in writing, and you will be fine. "I, Michael Senoff will advertise and sell Joe Smith's 1979 Toyota Corolla. I will show the car, I will take all of the photos, I will handle all inquiries, I will collect all the money, and I will deliver the car to the buyer. In consideration of my services, Joe Smith will pay Michael Senoff

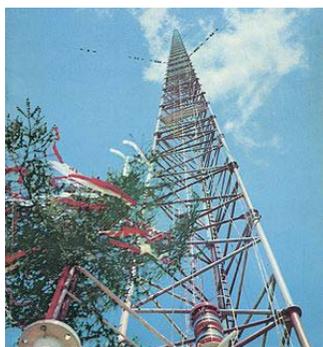

50% of the sale price. Michael Senoff agrees to pay for all advertising costs. Either party may cancel the sales agreement at any time in writing." Date, Signatures of both parties. The point is to make a simple letter of understanding, and both of you sign the deal. After you sell some of your friend's stuff, ask for referrals. You can make selling other people's stuff a full-time business by working with references and never having to place even one advertisement.

4. The Vanilla Ice Cream Flip

Vanilla is the #1 most popular ice cream flavor in most ice cream-loving countries, (namely, Germany, Italy, the United States, New Zealand, China, and Brazil). Can't argue with a classic. And it's the same with this classic. This method is so simple; all you need to do is go and visit your local thrift stores. Look for items you can buy for low and sell for a profit. You will have your smartphone with you so you can do your research at the store. Buy your item. Take it home and photograph it and then list it for sale for more money than you've paid for it. Keep the profits when it sells. Rinse and repeat. Here is a simple example of how this works below.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/bronco-buster-ski-flip/>

5. Warsaw Radio Tower Method

The Warsaw radio tower was erected in 1974. At a height of 646.38 m (2,121 ft) it became the tallest structure in the world. It collapsed in 1991. And there is a lesson in this story. You don't want to shy away from large items that you can't move or store. Like the Warsaw radio tower, large items can be broken down into sections and moved. I was able to make a fast $200 cash with this deal. My handyman, Oscar, was working on a home near me. He called to tell me he has some kitchen cabinets he was removing, and did I want them. He was going to be working on the house for two months, so I knew there was a lot of time to sell them. The home was close to me, so it was not going to take long to meet my eventual buyer at the location. So, I went to the house, and I took measurements and photos of the cabinets. I listed them on Offerup.com, and it did not take too long to sell them for $200. I did not have to move them. I did not have to store them. All I did was advertise and sell them and collect the money. Do you know how many contractors take stuff like this to the dump? All the time. Now, you can do something about it. If you can't sell it fast, get one of your drivers to bring it to you and let time be on your side to find the right buyer. See the example below in the link.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/how-to-sell-large-items-without-taking-possession/>

6. The Road Runner

Wile E. Coyote (also known simply as "The Coyote") and the Road Runner are cartoon characters from a series of Looney Tunes cartoons, created by Chuck Jones in 1949 for Warner Brothers. Wile E. Coyote will never catch the Road Runner—he is too fast. And you can make money just as fast by using the Road Runner Method. Here's an example of finding something listed for free online and picking it up and selling it. I have written about this kind of flip in past Money Shot News posts. And, it has to do with using my new little iPhone application called Nextdoor. It was on a Sunday, and I was lying down flat on my back. The great thing about the Nextdoor app is you can search for stuff offered for free. It also lets you search by location and by most recent posts. It has a messaging feature and you can thus instantly communicate with your sellers. I go to the Free section, and I see this post. There is a lady just giving away two beds with mattresses, comforter, pillows, and sheets. She also has a side table with a large storage compartment. She is also giving away a small class patio coffee table and a large comfortable chair with ottoman. I debate if I even want to go because the lazy Michael Senoff would rather stay flat on my back and "dream" about all the fast money he could make. But the non-lazy Michael Senoff knows that is all a dream. He knows that taking action is how you make money. So, I ask my bride, Shelley, if she wants to take a ride with me and she says... "YES". We get to the house. The lady just sold her home, and she had to have everything out that evening. So, my wife and I loaded up the El Camino and got the goods to our home. I did what I needed to do to get the stuff sold, and I listed the bed on Offerup.com. And what do you know? It sold. Folks, all you have to remember are these three words... Just Do It! See the photos at the link below.

7. Warren Buffett

With a net worth of $87.1 billion, "The Oracle of Omaha" is currently the third-richest person in the world— but he doesn't act like it. The billionaire is known for his frugal habits, like his daily McDonald's breakfast and insistence on using a flip phone. Warren understands that a dollar saved is money earned. And it's the same for you. Let me illustrate this example. I walked into the Goodwill and just look at what I found. I was able to qualify for a discount and paid only $9. I knew what I was going to do with it, and if you look at the photos, you'll see how to turn this ugly table into a $200 prince. Here are the tools I used. First, you need an excellent electric orbital sander. I invested in two top of the line German-engineered devices that I'll be able to use for a lifetime. STARTING OUT YOU DON'T NEED THIS. You can find inexpensive tools on eBay or Craigslist that may not be as good as what I have, and that is okay. But if you are serious about this, consider this sander. These tools do the work of five men in half the time. It's called the Festool RO 150 FEQ Rotex Sander + CT 48 Dust Extractor Discount Package. This sander is a boss. It can strip the top of a table in minutes. A regular sander could take days to do the same job. And their specially engineered sandpaper lasts a long time. When it comes to this sander, you get what you pay for. Next, you will need a can of heirloom white spray paint. The first thing I did was sand off the top and the edge of the table. Then I used blue painters tape and taped up the sides of the table. I flipped the table upside down and painted the legs and all the other parts of the table. You can grab spray-paint at your local hardware store for under $5 per can. I used two cans of spray-paint. After painting the legs of the table, I flipped the table over and stained the top. Then paint or roll a clear protective coat or two on top, and you're done. Don't let these steps stop you. This is easy-peasy with the right tools. And once you can do one, you can do another and another and another. Now, every next time you see a piece of furniture for sale, you will own the power to turn it into a masterpiece and sell it for many more dollars than what you've paid for it. A warning, however. You don't want to put too much time into these projects. You have to get this product done fast. Time is money. And, if you are the type of person who is going to spend endless hours on projects like this, it will not pay. Your time costs you money. So, get the job done fast and just good enough to sell. I liked the way this table came out so much that I decided to keep it for myself. UPDATE! Only two weeks later, I got an offer for $200, and I sold it. I needed to make room for another piece of furniture. In time, it all sells. You have to be willing to wait for the right buyer to come along.

8. James Andrews Flip

James Andrews M.D. is an American orthopedic surgeon. He is a surgeon for knee, elbow, and shoulder injuries. Andrews has become one of the most well known and popular orthopedic surgeons and has performed surgery on many high-profile athletes. He is also the team doctor for the Alabama Crimson Tide. He has performed surgeries on athletes including Bo Jackson, Michael Jordan, Jack Nicklaus, and Brett Favre. I call it the Surgeon flip because just like a surgeon, you have to diagnose the problem before you cut. James was very good at this. And don't shy away from broken items. Many can be fixed in a simple way and for very little money. Finding something broken, fixing it cheaply and reselling it for a substantial profit. A winning strategy!

This is a great story. And I need to remind myself of the story every time I am selling an appliance. There are some hidden benefits and profits in flipping washers, dryers, and more. So, I was selling a gas dryer to a couple who lived in my neighborhood. (NOT this one in the photo). The couple did not have a truck, and he offered me his old dryer if I would transport the one he bought from me. I said I would. And the dryer you see here in the photo is his old one that was broken. Anyway, I get the dryer home and see the only problem was the door that would not stay shut. I found the part on eBay and paid only $9. I had the part in two days. I grabbed a Phillips head screwdriver and replaced the part. It was so easy; even a two-year-old could do it. I listed the now fixed LG Ultra Capacity Gas Dryer on Offerup.com and sold it for $225.00. Now, do the math, my friend. What was I willing to do that my neighbor was not? His LAZY brain shut off. He spent $125 with me for another dryer when all he needed to pay was $9 to fix his better-quality dryer. People, it's sad to say you CAN make money off of stupidity. And this is the perfect high-profit story that offers the proof! Click the link below to see the money shot of the man who got an excellent dryer at a fair price.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/all-it-took-was-replacing-a-9-part-that-i-got-from-ebay/>

9. Garage Sale Granny

There are two types of garage sales. There are garage sales where people are trying to make money. And there are garage sales where people want to get rid of stuff. Stay away from the garage sales where people are trying to make money. You want the ones with a nice old lady like your grandmother who is nice to everyone she meets. She is up there in age and the money she makes is not important to her. She and grandpa are scaling down and have lived their best years. They are more than happy to "GET RID" of their items and pass them along to some nice people. In fact, they would almost pay you to take them away from them. This is what you want. This is who you want to buy from. When you see price tags on all of the items, that's a good clue it's a make money garage sale. Many sellers are unrealistic about what people are willing to pay. You want to narrow your focus on garage sales where people are trying to get rid of stuff. This way, you'll get better pricing and more value on the items you buy.

10. The Maytag Man Method

This is an exciting story and one I hope you will learn from. I was looking at Nextdoor.com, my new favorite app for finding free stuff to flip. And there is a listing for this 40-gallon gas hot water heater for free. In the ad, the seller described the water heater was working correctly, and she had taken it out because she just installed an electric tankless water heater. I asked her if she was sure it was working. She wrote back and told me her father was a plumber and he took it out himself and she was confident it was working. So, I picked it up and sold it to this guy on the phone. Now, the guy who bought it told me it's for his house. A day later, he calls back and tells me he can't get it to work, and he wants to return it. I said okay, because when I sell any appliance, I say to the buyer if they are not happy they can bring it back for a full refund. So, when he brings it again, I learn the guy's father is a plumber, and they wanted to install the hot water heater in a client's home. After I heard that, I suspected he was lying, and the client did not want it and that he told me it was not working so he could get a refund. Fair enough, right? I double-checked with the girl again to make sure it was working, and she reaffirmed it was. So, I relist it as a working unit and sell it to another guy. And I've never heard from the second buyer. So, I suspect the first buyer was lying. You don't ever knowingly want to sell broken items without disclosing the known problem. This kind of stuff will happen to you with appliances. But, for the most part, all my appliance sales have gone down smoothly. Anyway, from free to $180 is not too bad for some frustration. See the photo at this link below.

11. Boyz in the Hood

This is When You Are Just Driving and Finding Free Stuff and Selling For Profit

YES! You CAN make money just by driving around and looking for free stuff on the side of the road any day of the week, any time of the day. Here's a great illustration. It was early on a recent Saturday morning and I was on my way to the McDonald's drive-through to grab a large coffee. And to the left side window, I see these four rolls of fake grass on the curb. I circle Eleanor back and pull over to investigate the booty. This phony grass was in excellent condition, and I was sure there has to be someone out there who has a little patch of their yard they want to look better. So, I toss them in the back of the El Camino and drive them home. I then lay them out and stage them for sale. I measure each piece and take 12 photos for my Offerup.com listing. The very same day, I sell the rolls of fake grass for $120.00. Not too bad for a few minutes work. Don't ever judge what someone may want or not want. Your job is to get your find up for sale. And when you do, with time, the money will come. You have to have faith, my friend. The only reason I know with certainty my items will sell is that I've done it hundreds of times. See this example below.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/a-cup-of-coffee-leads-to-fun-fake-grass-flip/>

12. The Bob Vila Technique

Bob Vila is America's home improvement expert. He's known in the USA as a television show host known for 'This Old House'. Bob became a commercial spokesman for Sears and Roebuck and then hosted 'Bob Vila's Home Again'. Vila has written ten books, including a five-book series titled 'Bob Vila's Guide to Historic Homes of America'. And that is why I name this the buy fix technique after the great man Bob Vila. See this example at the link below. The Bob Vila method is when you hook up with a contractor who is remodeling a home, and you get all the old appliances.

13. The Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade

If you could sit in your car to watch the number of vehicles driving to the back of the Goodwill dropping off in the unloading Property you would be amazed. The moving parade technique represents the immense amount of items coming in and going out of thrift stores on an hourly basis. The sheer volume is enormous. This activity should be a reminder to go into the Goodwill or your local thrift store every day. Period! Why even question mark this? Because every day new items are being dropped off. Only when you watch and see for yourself will you understand this concept.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/cattcccch-the-wave/>

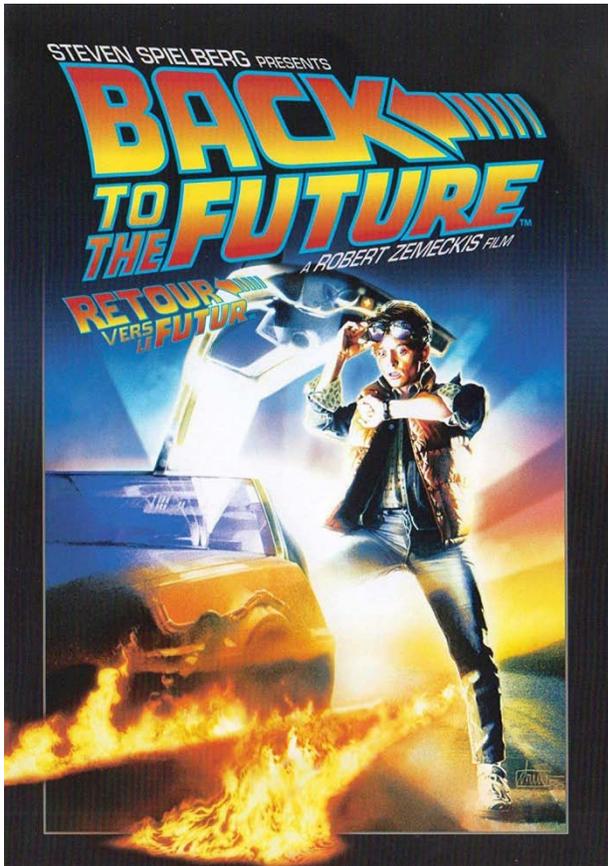

14. The Ultimate Taxi Technique

The Ultimate Taxi was born on Halloween night, 1983. Jon Barnes vision started modestly with a few flashlights, some dry ice, a Star Trek light on the dash, a good sound system, and some strategically placed tin foil. The rest is history. Today Jon Barnes from The Ultimate Taxi bills his cab as the only music studio, nightclub, planetarium, toy store, and Internet taxi on the planet! It's a rock & roll concert, roller coaster ride, magic show, movie ride, laser light show, and photo shoot. From the front seat of his 1978 Checker Cab, Barnes orchestrates a sophisticated in-taxi light show, complete with 9 lasers, 14 miniature stage lights, a revolving disco ball, and a $2,000 haze machine. The ride also includes toys, rainbow glasses, and a photo page on his world-famous website www.ultimatetaxi.com Famous celebrities like Ringo Starr, George Lucas, Jimmy Buffet, Clint Eastwood, Bob Dole, Michael Eisner, Michael Douglas, and Kevin Costner are among the many notables who have enjoyed this magical, mystery tour. This concept is when you buy something ordinary and make it look better by changing the look. I call this the Ultimate Taxi Technique because I've interviewed a man who transformed a regular taxi cab into something amazing. I would like to invite you to listen and learn from http://www.hardtfindseminars.com/ultimate_taxi.htm. You can see it with your own eyes. This case study is truly a trash to cash story. I was doing some exercise by walking around in my neighborhood. And as I turned left onto Argone Street, I saw this trash can with a large boogie board sticking out of the top. I was not sure what it was. But I grabbed it and proceeded home to complete my walk. I researched it by looking up the brand name on Google. And, I discovered it's called a Bully Board.

These wave riders are manufactured in Oceanside, California. It was initially designed for the extra-large wave riding enthusiasts of Makaha. Most commercially made boogie boards are too small. Lifeguards are now using a modified Bully Board, called LifeSled to rescue people from treacherous situations. Anyway, when I got this home, I discovered why the original owner threw it in the trash. The bottom covering was coming detached from the board. One trip to the Home Depot hardware store was all I needed to get this board into sellable shape. I purchased a can of aerosol 3M industrial adhesive. I sprayed on that stuff to re-attach the plastic securely to the board. I took photos and listed it on Offerup.com. And what do you know? The rest is history. A buyer came to a knocking. He told me he had been looking for one of these so he could ride tandem with his wife on the ocean waves of San Diego. I met him at the McDonalds close to me. Here's the money shot as proof. Many items you find will have to be cleaned and repaired. This repair was inexpensive and so simple a child could have done it. The Ultimate Taxi method is to remind you to take something ordinary, fix it and make it better than before. If I can do it, you can do it too. It does not get any easier than this!

15. The Back to The Future

This is when you buy a collection of items from someone, and you split and part them out and sell the pieces separately. I call this The Time Machine technique. Because when you buy someone's collection, you're purchasing time. Think about all the years Data collector has spent to acquire a collection of something. Think about all the postage, the shipping, the research, the unpacking, the buying, and whatever else it takes to collect something. When you purchase a collection, you're purchasing all the collector's efforts in time. And that's going to make you money because you're buying his collection at a very reduced price all at one time in only one transaction.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/sold-the-entire-collection/>

16. The Chop Shop Flip

Parting out for Profits. This is when you buy a machine. It can be a vintage stereo, a set of speakers, an appliance, a car, an ice machine, an old microwave oven. And you disassemble or separate the machine into all of its parts. Once you see all the components it involves to build a machine; you'll understand how easily it will become for you to make more money by separating and selling the parts compared to selling the entire unit.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/when-in-doubt-part-it-out/>

17. The Matt Malone Method

Retail stores throw away up to $50 billion worth of merchandise every year. One Texan is taking their waste to the bank, making big bucks as a professional dumpster diver. This Money Shot System method is in honor of the famous Texan, Matt Malone. He is what you would call a professional "dumpster diver." He says he can bring in a considerable amount of cash on the side. Matt ended up making $100,000 per year as a part-timer. The Matt Malone Method is when you look in the garbage dumpsters to find perfectly good items to sell. You can look behind large retail shopping centers for the best finds. You can look in dumpsters at apartment complexes. In the middle of June each year in San Diego, the international students fly home after the school year. And they can't take their stuff with them. They don't have the time or motivation to sell it. So, they take perfectly good stuff like appliances, refrigerators, clothing, and they do what lazy people do. They toss it in the trash. You can see one of my case studies at the Money Shot News membership site about this. Here's another excellent story about how I found a set of tire rims. On her way home from work, my wife saw a large microwave oven on the side of the road. She stopped her car and put the microwave in the backseat. She is always bringing home things like this. I advised her, the microwave was much too heavy for her to lift and to please not do it again. There is a good reason people put microwaves on the side of the road. And the main reason is because it's not working. However, it's my job to figure that out and the only way to do this is to pick it up, get it home and plug it in. So, I plugged the microwave oven in and pressed the start button. And nothing happened. So, I decided to dump it. I put the microwave in the back of the El Camino and I drove out into the San Diego sunset to look for a dumpster. Usually, we go to a dumpster at my friend's apartment. But this time, I found one closer, in the alley behind the post office.

As we were driving up toward the dumpster, I saw two things: (1) a woman picking items out of the dumpster standing near her bicycle. (2) four rims with tires. We could not believe our eyes. I parked right next to the dumpster, hopped out of the car, and quickly loaded the four tires and rims into the back. I dumped the microwave and drove back home. I felt like I was robbing a bank! It goes to show how one bad thing can lead to something good. As long as your toes are still tapping, you can make things happen. You never know what you are going to find when you are driving around. I've just sold the rims for $125. See the photos and read the case study at the link below.

<https://moneyshotnews.com/look-at-what-i-found-in-the-garbage>

18. The Hamburglar Method

The Hamburglar is a popular McDonald's villain who steals hamburgers but is usually foiled by his archrival, Ronald McDonald. I call this the Hamburglar method because it feels like you are almost doing something illegal. But you're not. Here's what you do. You simply get in your car and you drive through neighborhoods looking for valuables on property. This could be an old car covered with a car cover. It could be old doors leaning up against a fence or the wall of a garage. It could be a washer machine or dryer. It could be anything that you'd like to have to resell, but you can't take from the property legally. For any of these items, you will need to get permission FIRST from the owner. Never, NEVER EVER go onto someone's property and take an item even if it looks like it's free. So, what you do is you take a photograph of the street address and you take a photo of the item that's in the yard or garage. You take the photo from your car. When you get home, you print out the picture of the item on your printer, and you mail a simple letter asking if by any chance they were giving away the item you saw in their garage or on their property. I have found and acquired many things this way using the Hamburglar Method and you can do the same.

19. The Boss's Son Method

Don't ask the boss, ask the boss's son or the manager. He is the real decision maker in many cases. This is where you form a relationship with a lower level manager of a business, for example, a warehouse manager for old and discarded stock. I did this with the warehouse manager of a national chain of windows and door installers. I saw a listing on Offerup.com of a guy selling doors at ridiculously low prices. I drove up to meet him and formed a relationship with him. I told him I would buy any doors he had, and I made it easy for him to sell his doors. He was working and did not have time to wait for people to show up or not show up. So, after that, I had a consistent supply of used doors available to me for pennies on the dollar. After a year, he was promoted to in-home sales, so I lost that contact. But you can do this with any business out there. All it takes is only one relationship with one warehouse manager who can supply you with all the property you need to resell for profit. You can make these relationships by driving by and walking into businesses for specific manufacturers and distributors of the items you desire. Anyone relationship can generate an entire activity for you and your family. This could be for doors, windows, carpets, tiles, lumber, water heaters, Plexiglas, or anything you can think of. And you get their old stock for free and sell it.

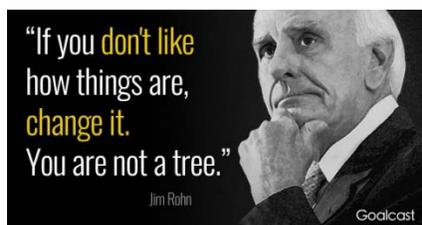

<https://moneyshotnews.com/door-score/>

20. The Bullish Bloodhound

The world famous “Sleuth Hound” does one thing better than any creature on earth: find people who are lost or hiding. An off-duty Bloodhound is among the canine kingdom’s most docile citizens, but he’s relentless and stubborn on scent. Bloodhounds have been known to follow a scent trail for more than 100 miles! If someone has ever walked past you and is wearing cologne or underarm deodorant, you’ve probably noticed that within a few minutes the smell disappears. A bloodhound's sense of smell is so strong it can still smell a trail up to 300 hours old! This hunting instinct is useful when you're going into an estate sale or garage sale where there are a lot of other shoppers. It's also useful when you have multiple items laid out on a table. What you want to do is take pictures with your digital camera of the items you want. Pay special attention to the model numbers of each item you photograph. Then go home and get in front of your computer and start doing your research. Look for items that have the most significant profit margins and make notes. Then go back to the sale and buy the items that will make you the most profit. This technique allows you to do your research in a calm atmosphere without stress. This works especially well for sales close to home. Most shoppers can't take the time to do this research on site. Be more like a bloodhound and you will always find what you are looking for.

21. The Jim Rohn

Jim Rohn was an American entrepreneur, author, and motivational speaker. He built one of the largest direct selling organizations of its time. And for 40 plus years, he was conducting personal development seminars all over the world. Jim Rohn would say, "What's simple to do is also simple not to do. The magic is not in the complexity of the task; the magic is in the doing of simple things repeatedly and long enough to ignite the miracle of the Compound Effect." In his own words... I found it easy to set the goals that could change my life. They found it easy not to. I found it easy to read the books that could affect my thinking and my ideas. They found that easy not to. I found it easy to attend the classes and the seminars, and to get around other successful people. They said it probably really wouldn't matter. If I had to sum it up, I would say what I found to be easy to do, they found to be easy not to do. Six years later, I'm a millionaire and they are all still blaming the economy, the government and company policies, yet they neglected to do the basic, easy things. In fact, the primary reason most people are not doing as well as they could and should, can be summed up in a single word: neglect. And it's all the same with this Money Shot Method. It's easy to visit the Goodwill store five times per week. And it's easy not to. For example, last Wednesday, I walked into the Goodwill store on the corner of Claremont Drive and Balboa Avenue in San Diego.

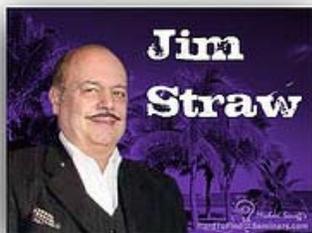

I head straight to the back of the store where all the furniture is. Four green chairs caught my attention. I struggled to pick one of them up. These chairs are cumbersome, meaning they are of good quality. I can quickly flip them. I used my store discount and paid $7 for each chair, totaling $28. I was excited about this purchase. I immediately took them home and shot 12 good quality photographs. I uploaded them to Offerup.com and Craigslist.com. It took only two days to sell them for a total of $125. It is best not to try and guess what is at the back of the Goodwill store.

It is much better to show up every day to see what is new in the store. You never know what you will find. This example of making an easy one $100 should get you excited enough to do the same. Nothing is stopping you. Are you ready? Fast flips are what you want with common everyday items people need.

22. The Jim Straw

Jim Straw was a genius when it came to options. He taught me about the outrageous Option Agreement. And I soon learned how I could use this agreement in my property hunting business.

How can you take legal possession of something and sell it without actually owning it? It's with my outrageous Option Agreement. I learned about this intelligent agreement from the late great direct mail king. Jim has sold over 400 million dollars of products via the mail.

He also made $1,000,000 back in the day when a million bucks were something sniping around. He tells the story of how he had learned about an abandoned building that had over one million dollars worth of printing equipment. He was able to use this legal options agreement to take temporary ownership of this equipment so he could sell it. With an options agreement and the rights to extend the time the agreement is good for; you have total control and legal ownership of a product for virtually no money down. When you start using my Neighborhood Snoop letter, you are going to come across all kinds of valuable stuff. And the seller would be willing to sell you the item.

But you don't want to invest your money in something only to take ownership. Now you can use this legal options agreement to do the same. I know you have heard of OPM—Other People's Money. Well, this is the perfect example of how to take control over valuable property using none of your own money. Therefore, reducing your downside risk to almost nothing. This agreement will help you legally take ownership of valuable property for an agreed time frame without you having to pay or take ownership. It will virtually erase your downside risk in buying and selling items too large to take possession of. Below is a link to the options agreement.

And below is an example of how this Option Agreement was used.

23. The Lonely Storm Chasers

Storm chasers can have a lonely life. They will drive thousands of miles to hunt and witness a severe storm, tornado or worse. And each storm is often active for just a short window of time, typically in the spring and early summer. Their frequent stomping grounds are the Great Plains, otherwise known as Tornado Alley. And you too should become a storm chaser and chase the storm of good deals waiting for you any day of the week. Here's a fun story of how I chased down some profits. It all started on a quiet Sunday afternoon. I wasn't doing anything, so I went on Craigslist.com to look at the "free" section to see what was available for free in my neighborhood. To my astonishment, someone was giving away 700 record albums. The ad was listed as a "curb alert"—meaning whoever gets to the records first gets to keep them. I got into Eleanor, my 1977 Chevy El Camino to hot rod over to the address given in the Craigslist add. And on my way, I passed an estate sale. I wanted to stop but decided to continue to get the 700 records before someone beat me to them. When I arrived at the address, the records were gone—I was too late.

Undaunted, I turned the car around and stopped at the estate sale. The first thing I saw was a beautiful mid-century-looking wall clock. I bought it for two dollars. I posted the clock on Offerup.com and I sold it for $90. Two dollars into $90 is not a bad deal! Lesson learned: I turned a loss (the albums) into a profit (the clock). Getting the records was what I wanted, but getting the clock is what I got. I was rewarded for my effort. It will work for you too. You will also be rewarded for your efforts!

24. Nosey Newman

Be more like Newman from Seinfeld. He was Jerry Seinfeld's most annoying neighbor. He'd stop at nothing to nab a discount, steal an appliance, or raid a refrigerator. It was just before dinner. I had some lamb chops on the grill, and I was pretty excited to dig in when I heard my wife yelling. "Hey, Mike! Did you see what Steve put out?" So, I went next door and saw this beautiful 20-gallon, 5 HP Craftsman compressor sitting in front of our neighbor's house. I didn't think twice. I immediately lifted it on its back wheel and took the compressor home before the workmen across the street could beat me to it. Later that evening, Steve came up to me. "Mike! Did you see what I put out?" And I said, "Yeah, I've got it right here. Thanks!" He explained that the compressor still started up, but the chamber wasn't filling with air. Good thing he told me before I tried to sell it. Phew! My next step was going online to figure out the problem. After a bit of research and a quick visit to eBay, I was able to fix it. Then I created a listing on Craigslist, and it didn't take long before it sold. That's all it takes, folks. A little bit of effort, a little bit of research, and a little bit of hustling.

25. Bankruptcy Bonanza

Here is another great way to locate deals on items you can resell for high profits. Our local shopping mall, University Town Center, recently went through a massive remodeling. The Sears and Roebuck store that had been there for over 40 years was closing down, and they were liquidating the entire department store. You know what liquidation means, right? That means that EVERYTHING has to go. It was an excellent opportunity to score some good stuff from a company that had to get rid of stuff.

My son and I drove over to see what they had for sale. We hit the jackpot for cool, unique items. I drooled over the 50-foot wall of wood shelving that used to display the jeans in the men's section. I needed more space for my buying-and-selling gigs. I got the entire 50-foot wall of wood shelving for only $300. We also scored this vintage brass Sears and Roebuck pressed-metal wall sign for $25, and the cool wood Levi's hanging display logo for $15. Each of the Craftsman tool signs was only $10. And look at these cool, authentic wood Sears-branded crates we picked up for just $15 each. Finding the liquidation manager and negotiating items is the best way to get low prices.

Even though it's not a garage sale, talking to the person in charge can help to score you some deals. In this case, he also took us into the backrooms of the Sears warehouse to look through boxes. It was a fun day and we sold most, if not all of the items we found at this liquidation. Don't be afraid to negotiate and ask for even lower prices. The liquidation manager's primary goal is to liquidate the items. If you can make his or her job faster and more manageable, he may just say yes. Remember, you make your money when you buy it. See the photos at the link below.

26. Salvator Mundi

Currently, the most expensive painting in the world is The Salvator Mundi by Leonardo da Vinci. It's a depiction of Jesus Christ holding a crystal orb. The painting was commissioned by King Louis XII of France in 1605, during the same period as the Mona Lisa. It had disappeared from all records until it was rediscovered in 2005, by a group of British art dealers. They bought the painting for $10,000 and then spent six years restoring and investigating its history before eventually announcing that it was a Da Vinci original. The painting became known as the "Lost Leonardo". It was purchased by the Crown Prince of Saudi Arabia, Mohammed bin Salman for $450.3 Million. As you get out in the field you will come across paintings. I hope for your sake you find the next Da Vinci. It could happen to you! If you are willing to take some time and do some research on the art you find, you may be able to hit the jackpot. You never know. I have watched a lot of videos on how to value art, and there is a lot to learn on the subject. There is a lot to learn about art and knowing what to look for will help you score your next million-dollar painting. At the link below, you'll see a case study on how I got this painting from Garage Sale Mike for $5. (Check out my 6-part interview with Garage Sale Mike. This interview is

Anyway, I bought the painting because I saw a painting like this sell for $65 on eBay. I brought it home, dusted it off, and listed it for sale. After two weeks, nothing happened. It sat in my office for months. After three months, I finally received an offer and sold the painting. Here's the thing I want to stress: when it comes to buying and selling art or anything for that matter, it's time that is essential for your sale. The longer time you don't have items up for sale, the more money you lose. This is why you need to start buying and selling NOW. Time is your money multiplier. Get your items up for sale. Most items will sell way faster than three months. You won't make any money unless your stuff is listed and up for sale.
